GRACE LEUENBERGER

Hometown Pittsburgh, PA

Position/Roles at Q Marketing support, content creation, graphic design assistance.

What are some things you have learned? One thing I learned was how to communicate the vision, mission, and voice of Q in a variety of mediums from email and social media to study guides and materials for the Q 2018 conference guide. This was a fun challenge to take on, and I learned how to write in clear and concise ways. Outside of work-related tasks, I learned a great deal about myself and my personality and what it looks like to follow Jesus in all seasons of life. Moving to Nashville was way out of my comfort zone, but I'm so glad I took the risk, stepped out, and was able to call Q and Nashville home during these months.

What would you say to someone interested in applying to be a fellow? Being a Q Fellow is an experience that will challenge you to take on tasks that expand your skillset and challenge you to tackle new tasks and skills that you previously might not have had the chance to explore. Since Q is a small team, your time as a fellow will matter — you'll be handling important tasks that contribute to both the short term and long term vision of Q, and I found a lot of value in that!

One of your favorite moments as a Q fellow? One night of the conference (Q 2018), we hosted an after-party concert with an artist I really like named Drew Holcomb. Afterwards, a few of us from Q drove through downtown Nashville on that warm spring night with the windows down and got celebratory milkshakes and slushies at Sonic while listening to our favorite music on the drive.

Favorite spot in Nashville? Radnor Lake State Park. I lived right near it, and walked my dog there every day at sunrise.

ADRIANNA CANNONE

Hometown Columbus, Ohio

Position/Roles at Q National Events & Operations Fellow

What are some things you have learned? I have learned about the collaboration and communicating together as a team to work towards common goals. I have learned to multi-task and have seen small jobs make large impacts. My role is very versatile and flexible when it comes to what needs to be accomplished at Q. As an extrovert this team has allowed me to flourish in the diversity of my different jobs. I love routine, but can thrive on spontaneity as well. Organization and structure are important to me in the workplace and I have shuffled those strengths to help build up my weaker responsibilities or skill sets.

What would you say to someone interested in applying to be a fellow? Come in with an open mind. Clear your plate of expectations. It is an experience that only God can move in and sharpen you if you let it. God is at the core of why Q exists and it quickly has changed what I could grasp in terms of faith and career co-existing. God is always moving and I have loved seeing how He has worked through Q. If you want to be humbled in the best ways, I would strongly encourage you to be a part of what happens when Q is not just broadcasted and put together for our events. Nothing is glamorized and anything worth something takes a lot of work. Come ready and willing.

One of your favorite moments as a Q fellow? I loved our trip to Seattle in the fall and meeting other fellows or interns from all over the country. At Q, I have loved the camaraderie of working with each fellow. There is always room to improve, grow and be challenged. Hearing from other leaders in their industry has brought great insight into the path I want to go on from here. I remember my first day was the week of our annual fall Q Commons event and everyone was working at an adrenaline pace and then the spring Q Conference came along and it reminded me of what I was told within my first month of being here, "we care about people". If you care about people and seeing them benefit from content we believe in, this will be formative in your faith journey. Q started as a job to do, but feels like a family I get to work with every day now.

Favorite spot in Nashville? I'm not an avid coffee drinker, but I love exploring new coffee/restaurant spots with people I love. My favorite restaurant is a little place called Sunflower Cafe. I have been in Nashville going on 6 years and each year I fall more in love with different parts of the city. Going to college here has fostered a great amount of community, but as a recent graduate Q has helped me focus on narrowing my community because I have learned I can spread myself to thin in a city I have become comfortable in. The best thing about Nashville is there is always something going on, whether you're into music, sports, hiking, ministry, there is a spot for you somewhere. Try everything and I assure you there will be something you join that starts to become a part of you and make Nashville feel like home.

FELLOWS

TCHAIZEL AMBION

Hometown Long Beach, CA

Position/Roles at Q Marketing fellow, Social Media Coordinator, help run QWeekly and Q podcasts, In-House Photography

What are some things you have learned? How to own certain tasks that no one else is responsible for, and at the same time how to help others I work with fulfill or excel in whatever need there is to help get to the finish line.

What would you say to someone interested in applying to be a fellow? Come ready to be thrown at something, no matter how big or small, and aim to produce your best work. It doesn't matter if you aren't an expert — because your opportunity is to learn about the things Q cares about while getting to collaborate with everyone on the team. Ask hard questions and bring your voice to the table, especially if it may not be what everyone else thinks. We can only move forward on our ideas plus execution. No risk, no reward.

One of your favorite moments as a Q fellow? So far, it's spending Mondays together in meetings and team lunch. Another personally is when we get really close a gear up for big Q events — the entire office just rallies together to get some hands-on things done and it's just some good ol' bonding time.

Favorite spot in Nashville? I refuse to choose one: Killebrew Coffee - Thai Phooket - Funk Seoul Factory
